Outline Description	Parish Church dedicated to St Andrew
Property Description	The 17th century church was heavily restored in the 1940s as it was greatly damaged by the enemy action during WWII. The façade consists of a rectangular structure with a centrally placed doorway set within two pairs of double pilasters which support a pediment. The doorway is further more flanked by a pair of columns which support an open balcony set within an archway which houses a vertical rectangular window. The central bay is crowned by a pediment above which, are three statues in the round. A bell tower on either side above the side doorways leading to the side-aisles is supported by two pilasters. A small rose window and a clock are placed above the side doors. At parapet wall level the structure is decorated by a band of triglyphs. The bell towers are richly carved and contrast with the fairly plain facade. An unusual characteristic is the facts that the bell towers are not placed right at the corner but further towards the centre.
